Annual Chapter Organ Crawl Explores Hidden Gems

Nearly 30 chapter members spent Patriots Day touring six highly contrasting organs in the Harvard Square area of Cambridge. This year's crawl allowed the opportunity to hear and play unique, historic instruments rarely seen or heard outside of church services.

The day began at Harvard's Memorial Church with a one-manual, mechanical-action instrument originally built in 1862 by E.L. Holbrook of East Medway (now Millis), Massachusetts. Located in the chapel's rear balcony, the organ has been restored and sympathetically enlarged.

Next was the colorful 3-manual, 50-rank organ at Cambridge's First Church of Christ, Scientist. Although designed by G. Donald Harrison of Aeolian-Skinner, the organ was built in 1936 by W.W. Kimball of Chicago, and was restored by Nelson Barden in 1977-78.

The tour then proceeded to hear and play the 1805 chamber organ built by William Gray of London located in the gallery of Christ Church. Most of the Gray organ's eleven ranks are divided into treble and bass registers; a treble Oboe and Dulciana are enclosed in a small swell enclosure. The Wissenger Organ Company restored this gentle, graceful instrument in 1998.

The design of the 1956 Walter Holtkamp organ in the chapel of Episcopal Divinity School was influenced by Cambridge organists Melville Smith and E. Power Biggs. Recently restored mechanically by John Bishop, the tour's host at EDS, the three-manual electro-pneumatic instrument features Holtkamp's signature functional pipe arrangement, including an early revival of the Rückpositiv, located behind the console on the gallery railing.

The next instrument was the one-manual and pedal tracker instrument by Philip Beaudry in the Society of Saint John the Evangelist. Completed in 1975 and revoiced in 1998 by Scot Huntington, the divided-compass organ includes a powerful mounted Cornet and stands on a moveable platform.

The last featured organ was a large three-manual, 1861 E. and G.G. Hook instrument in Saint Peter's Church on Concord Avenue. The organ was restored in 1995 by Tim Hawkes of Saugus.

Organ Library News

An Important Milestone at the Organ Library

By the time Chapter members will be reading this Newsletter, data entry on the Organ Library's Webcatalog will have reached the end of the "composers" section of the catalog. This represents about 100,000 pieces of data that will be eventually searchable from anywhere in the world via the Internet. The Webcatalog will offer, for example, the potential of searching the entire contents of the Library for settings of a specific hymn. This feature alone has required an enormous investment of time, and a tremendous debt of gratitude is owed to dedicated volunteers Wendy Covell, Anita Nagem, and Barbara Swist.

The data will be checked before being transmitted to the Instructional Technology Office of Boston University for insertion in the search program. In order to make this launch as comprehensive as possible, the Library needs members of the Chapter to review their personal music libraries for items that could be donated before the Library goes "on line." For further information contact Barbara Owen (Librarian) or Joseph Dyer (Chairman).

Inevitably, some donated items duplicate scores already in the Library's collections. Duplicates are sold for the benefit of the Library. For a list of currently available items send a message to joseph.dyer@umb.edu. Monetary donations are also welcome (and tax-deductible). The address of the Library is: BU School of Theology, 745 Commonwealth Ave., Rm. 2B, Boston, MA 02215.

Chapter Member Wins Competition

Providence Jeeyoon Choi, doctoral candidate at Boston University studying under James David Christie, recently won first prize at the "11th Elizabeth Elftman Organ Competition" in San Marino, California.

She played: J.S. Bach's Prelude and Fugue in C minor, BWV 546; A. Guilmant's Sonata No.1; and K. Leighton's Prelude, Scherzo and Passacaglia, Op.41.

Currently, Ms. Choi is the Music Director and Organist at the Park Avenue Congregational Church in Arlington, Massachusetts, and Organist at Our Lady Comforter of the Afflicted Church in Waltham, Massachusetts. She also teaches organ at Boston University.
