The Winter of 2002/2003 and Organ Health

The Winter of 2002/2003 was long, cold, and, remarkably, had no embedded "thaws" or other warm intervals.

Although I do not have access to all organ maintenance statistics this past winter, I do have my own experiences plus input from various colleagues in the trade. And it would appear that this past Winter was not kind to organs.

In one church I arrived to find wind noise emanating from everywhere! Virtually every chest joint had loosened up due to wood shrinkage. In addition, there were severe cracks in several toe boards. It appeared that the heat was left on at extremely high levels for an extended period following a boiler replacement.

While the above is an extreme example, it typifies the kind of damage that can result from weeks and months of excessively dry central heat pumped through the instruments. It is true in many cases that the instrument may recover when the wood re-expands, but constant shifting of wood against gaskets will eventually take its toll on the gaskets, if nothing else, and cracks in wood most definitely do not repair themselves. Nor is dry heat good for the longevity of leather. In both cases repairs can indeed be expensive.

I urge all members with excessive dryness situations to try to push through the installation of a central humidification system. We tried using Home Depot type portable humidifiers at some locations - while better than nothing, they need constant attention and don't have the capacity to humidify large rooms. Competent heating contractors should be able to assess your needs and recommend the proper solution.

Yes, this is more money to spend in an already tight financial environment. But we are talking about avoiding damage costing thousands or even tens of thousands to repair.

While we cannot control the weather, we can certainly prevent some of its nasty side-effects!

Position Open for Bass Section Leader/Soloist

First Unitarian Society in West Newton is seeking a bass section leader for an experienced 20 voice volunteer choir. Schedule is September through June, with rehearsal Sundays at 9:00 am, followed by service at 10:15, plus a Wednesday evening rehearsal once per month. Flexible schedule - one Sunday per month excused.

Qualifications include a competent voice and leadership, sight-singing skills, and choral singing experience. Solo capability is welcome.

Repertoire is varied from Renaissance to contemporary, a cappella and foreign languages when appropriate, and includes major choral works.

Compensation $75 per Sunday.

Contact Roberta Humez as soon as possible at 508-653-1092 or music@fusn.org. Audition will include singing at a June Sunday service for a fee.
