Dean's Message

Greetings!

“Music is the silence between the notes.” — attr. Claude Debussy

Just over 20 years ago, on Tuesday morning 11 September 2001, I was at home preparing for the first rehearsal of the season which would take place later that evening. Once the first plane hit the World Trade Center, my attention turned to the news; though the TV remained on for a good part of the day, what I recall is silence— my own silence. What was there to say or do, other than sitting still and observing the events unfolding in front of me, first in real time, and then in countless re-plays. Fast-forward 20 years, and things feel strangely similar; many of the events we are faced with in person or on the news are completely out of the norm. Is my reaction merely silence, or full-fledged disbelief?

We've begun the Year of the Young Organist at a very strange time indeed. It could easily be argued that now isn't the time to be encouraging young people to study the organ or embark on a career with the King of Instruments. However, if the past 20 years have lessons to offer, perhaps one is simply that times will always be uncertain. Our institution does need to continue working with the soil no matter the current weather conditions, if we hope to produce a harvest down the line. Knowing full well that I no longer qualify as a young organist (!) I sought inspiration from one of our more recent Young Organist Initiative graduates, Miss Savannah Curro; she has kindly written to us for this September Pipings, and gives evidence that our soil has indeed been well tended. Perhaps “gift” yourself a moment of silence, and then read what she has to share as we officially begin our 2021-22 season.

Dear Valued Boston AGO Colleague,

During the pandemic, many of us have had to endure times of extended silence: the silence of our missing choirs, the silence of our idle car engines, and the silence of our congregations filing into a Zoom meeting room rather than a church sanctuary seconds before the prelude. In quietness, I have come to more greatly appreciate the space of warmth and healing that music occupies in my daily life.

When I was 15 years old, I had my very first organ lesson. My life had not been musically silent before that point; I had sung in choirs, played the glockenspiel in my school’s concert band, and took piano lessons on the spinet in my dining room. However, my life had lacked a pattern of musical richness, where music became both a passion and a vocation. The more I played the organ, the more the moments of silence during my day, due to their increasing scarcity, became both ever more sacred.

When I was selected as a Young Organist Initiative Scholar during the fall of 2016, the generous scholarship the selection granted me towards paying for sheet music and organ lessons, permitted me to explore my passion for the organ and potential to pursue church music as a vocation without the anxiety of finding the funds to pay for lessons. The YOI program, by connecting me with a supportive teacher, Ms. Cathy Meyer, and giving me the opportunity to perform at King’s Chapel, empowered me to strive to be the best organist I could be. My positive experience in the program called me to become an organ performance major at Mercer University, where I am currently a junior studying under Dr. Jack Mitchener. At Mercer, I am also pursuing a BA in History and am an active member of several musical and non-musical student organizations, including the university’s touring choir, the Mercer Singers, and the Episcopal-Lutheran campus ministry, for which I serve as student president. Currently, I am the Director of Music and Organist at St. Andrew’s-by-the-Sea Episcopal Summer Chapel in Rye Beach, NH as well as the co-organist at Forsyth Presbyterian Church in Forsyth, GA.

During this Year of the Young Organist, as we continue to grapple with the impact of the pandemic on our church music ministry programs and our ability to perform as organists, I want to remind you of how organ lessons can continue to transform a young person’s life as well as to encourage you to not view all silence as a stumbling block, but rather an opportunity to more greatly appreciate the great gift of music that we have.

*Soli Deo Gloria,
Savannah Curro

Get Back in (Singing) Shape: A Post-Pandemic Workshop for Choral Singers with Bonnie Pomfret, soprano and master teacher

Even if your choir had virtual rehearsals, sitting in front of a screen and singing to it are nothing like singing in an acoustical space with other singers! As we begin at last to make music together, it's time to get our voices back in shape with a technical tune up. In this interactive workshop, Bonnie will help your choral singers:

- reconnect to their breathing
- enhance their resonance
- reclaim their support
- energize their singing

Your singers will feel (and you will hear) the difference!
One-hour workshop by appointment: $200 in-person or virtual.

Bonnie Pomfret, soprano, has sung around the U.S. and internationally; her solo CD of songs by American women was received to critical acclaim. She holds the DM in Voice from Indiana University and the MM in Voice from Boston Conservatory. Bonnie is a Certified McClosky Vocal Technician and Master Teacher and served as a Singing Voice Specialist at Peoria ENT Group and Emory Voice Center (Atlanta). Bonnie has served on the voice faculties of Boston University, Emory University, and Illinois State University, and has presented at the international Congress of Voice Teachers, the Korean Association of Voice Professionals in the Arts, the Voice Foundation, the American Speech and Hearing Association, and at numerous regional conferences.
